Quotes about theory
“Theories contain instructions for reading the world and acting in it.” (Anderson, 1996)

“A theory is any organized set of concepts, explanations, and principles of some aspect of human experience.” (Littlejohn & Foss, 2008)

Course Description:
This required doctoral seminar provides an examination and critical analysis of the major theories of communication processes, including systems theory, structural theories and semiotics, behaviorism, symbolic interactionism, theories of the social construction of reality, and other theoretical approaches to the study of communication. As such, this course involves the excavation, critical analysis, and where necessary, deconstruction of the philosophical building blocks and metatheoretical assumptions that form the foundations of various approaches to the construction of theories, methods, and arguments used to support claims to truth in the study of communication. The course will be framed with discussions of the differences and/or similarities among these approaches in terms of their take on epistemology, ontology, praxeology, and axiology. First, we will answer questions such as, “What is a theory?” And “How are theories that explain or predict elements of the phenomenal world, created?” Once we have the tools to examine and evaluate these theories, we will investigate the history and development of theoretical work in applied communication contexts.

General Course Objectives:
After completing this seminar, students will:

1. Understand the importance of communication theory from multiple philosophical perspectives including the specific influences of various epistemic traditions and schools of thought on the development of theories used in communication research.

2. Expand upon their knowledge of the historical development, conceptual framework, and current status of several key communication theories in multiple contexts from major philosophical perspectives.
3. Distinguish the relationship between theory and research methods, including standards for evaluation and analysis of theories through discussion and critique of current communication theories.

4. Master the vocabulary of and ethics regarding the study of communication theory.

5. Acquire the tools to analyze and critique theory at a high level, using appropriate criteria.

6. Begin thinking about ways to integrate new philosophical and/or theoretical insights into the current body of knowledge that constitutes individual fields of specialization.

Required Textbooks:

Supplemental journal articles and book chapters will also be required throughout the course. All supplemental articles will be available on Canvas.

Course Requirements and Assignments:

Attendance/In-Class Participation

This is a discussion class. The primary focus of your participation should be engaged and lively discussion. Students should complete assigned readings and make notes about readings before class so they can participate in an enthusiastic and informed manner. Other components of active, in-class participation include thoughtful and appropriate verbal participation (more does not always = better), concentrating on course material rather than distractions (e.g., laptops, cell phones), and providing support to class members. I will record notes about participation for each student during class and after every course session I will assign each student a participation grade for the week (a total of 5 points each week for 14 weeks = 70 possible points).

I also recognize that there are multiple learning styles and I will take note of supplementary forms of participation such as active listening and taking notes during seminar, providing focused attention for the entire class period, and course-related but non-assignment-related office hour visits.
Weekly Response Papers

The weekly response papers should be one page in length (double spaced) and help you organize your thoughts and/or communicate your reactions to (e.g., confusion, joy, anger), the week’s readings. These papers could represent reactions, extensions, rants, raves, critiques, questions, ideas, and so on. An important and required part of each paper should be a section title “What I Would Like to Talk About This Week is . . .”

Additionally, you are required to come up with at least one discussion question, preferably two, per week. I will use your thoughts and discussion questions in planning for each class session. Discussion questions should be detailed and open-ended. They should reflect higher-level thinking and connection between the readings. Weekly papers are due at 9AM on each day of class (beginning Wednesday August 31) and must be word-processed and submitted to the appropriate location on Canvas. NOTE: The link will close at 9AM and you will not be able to submit the assignment late or via email. These papers will not be graded (you either do them CORRECTLY or you do not) and they are worth 10 points apiece. I expect that these papers will help you prepare your class participation. They are also important because they help me understand what to expect from students in class.

Midterm Examination

A take-home midterm examination will be provided on October 5, 2016. Students will be given two weeks to complete the exam that consists of a series of short answer and essay questions (based on class readings up to that point). The midterm exam will assess synthesis, application, and evaluation of foundational course content. The midterm examination is due on Wednesday, October 19, 2016.

Group Project and Presentation

The group project paper and presentation will involve students (ideally in groups of 2 or 3) explicating one of the areas of interest in the College of Communication and Information (i.e., Department of Communication, Journalism and Media Studies, Department of Integrated Strategic Communication, School of Information Science, and Instructional Communication). There may be more than one group for a particular area depending on interest and the size of the class. You will interview at least two faculty members and read at least five articles and chapters, written by faculty members in that area) to determine what the current important theories are. The results of this information seeking must generate both a paper and a class presentation. Your paper should discuss how theory and paradigmatic allegiances are used by scholars’ work in this area of the College. An exemplar theory (article or chapter) from a faculty member in your assigned area should be distributed to me and the class one week before the presentation. My expectation is that the written portion of the project will be 6-8 pages. The presentation should reiterate what is discussed in the paper for the class in an interesting and informative manner. Visual aids, such as Prezi, are encouraged but not required. The presentation will be similar to a conference presentation where each group will get a chance to speak and I will respond at the end. The presentations will be about 10-15 minutes in length. More details will be provided in class and on Canvas.

Theory Evaluation Paper

The theory evaluation paper will involve choosing a theory, describing it, explicating its underlying assumptions and perspectives, and evaluating it given criteria discussed in class. The term paper is a detailed critical review of literature that presents the origins and traces the development of a prominent communication theory. The theory should be associated with one of the areas that we will examine in this course. One section of the paper should focus on the development of the theory. Which part of the discipline does this theory fit into? What led to the development of this theory? What are the epistemological, ontological, and axiological assumptions that underlie this theory? Has the theory been tested? How well does the theory withstand these tests? Has the theory generated scholarship? How? My expectation for this paper is that it will be a detailed review of your chosen theory. I want you to use this paper to become an expert on this theory but also to have a well-written paper. Your paper should be appropriate for presentation at the meetings of a national, regional, or state communication association. It should also conform to the following guidelines:

1. Papers should be of convention-submission quality and approximately 18-22 pages in length (excluding title page, abstract, references, appendices, etc.).
2. Papers should follow APA (6th ed.) style and format.
4. The final manuscript is due Wednesday December 14.

Seminar Format, Policies, and Decorum:
While we will create our own norms of decorum throughout the semester, it is important that we agree to some basic rules of decorum in the conduct of this seminar.

Method of Instruction

This is a seminar class. The lecture method of dispensing information is for many purposes impractical and inefficient in a graduate seminar. I expect you to acquire information with minimal teacher direction and employ your own personal learning strategies. With a few exceptions, I will not come prepared to lecture on course materials. Rather, I will come armed with a number of questions (some taken from your weekly papers) designed to generate course discussion. Ideally, active participation in class will facilitate all students’ understanding of course material.

Differences in Scholarly Positions

Over the course of the semester, we will be discussing myriad positions one can possess about communication theory and scholarship. We will compare and contrast theories and perspectives; however, this course is not about which perspective is “best.” Instead, my goal is to introduce you to the various perspectives that typify the communication discipline and encourage lively and civil discussion about these perspectives—both their advantages and disadvantages.

Religious Holidays

Students anticipating an absence for a major religious holiday are responsible for notifying the Instructor in writing of anticipated absences due to their observance of such holidays no later than the last day of add/drop. Information regarding dates of major religious holidays may be obtained through the religious liaison, Dr. David Beach (859-257-2754).

Accommodations for Disabilities

If you have a documented disability that requires academic accommodations, please see me by the end of the second week of class during scheduled office hours. In order to receive accommodations in this course, you must provide me with a Letter of Accommodation from the Disability Resource Center (725 Rose Street, Multidisciplinary Science Building, Suite 407, Lexington, KY 40536-0082, (859) 257-2754, email address susan.fogg@uky.edu) for coordination of campus disability services available to students with disabilities.

Academic Honesty

Per university policy, students shall not plagiarize, cheat, or falsify or misuse academic records. Students are expected to adhere to University policy on cheating and plagiarism in all courses. The minimum penalty for a first offense is a zero on the assignment on which the offense occurred. If the offense is considered severe or the student has other academic offenses on their record, more serious penalties, up to suspension from the university may be imposed. Plagiarism and cheating are serious breaches of academic conduct. Each student is advised to become familiar with the various forms of academic dishonesty as explained in the Code of Student Rights and Responsibilities. Complete information can be found at the following website: http://www.uky.edu/Ombud. A plea of ignorance is not acceptable as a defense against the charge of academic dishonesty. It is important that you review this information as all ideas borrowed from others need to be properly credited.

Part II of Student Rights and Responsibilities (available online http://www.uky.edu/StudentAffairs/Code/part2.html) states that all academic work, written or otherwise, submitted by students to their instructors or other academic supervisors, is expected to be the result of their own thought, research, or self-expression. In cases where students feel unsure about the question of plagiarism involving their own work, they are obliged to consult their instructors on the matter before submission.

When students submit work purporting to be their own, but which in any way borrows ideas, organization, wording or anything else from another source without appropriate acknowledgement of the fact, the students are guilty of plagiarism. Plagiarism includes reproducing someone else’s work, whether it be a published article, chapter of a book, a paper from a friend or some file, or something similar to this. Plagiarism also includes the practice of employing or allowing another person to alter or revise the work which a student submits as his/her own, whoever that other person may be.

Students may discuss assignments among themselves or with an instructor or tutor, but when the actual work is done, it must be done by the student, and the student alone. When a student’s assignment involves research in outside sources of information, the student must carefully acknowledge exactly what, where and how he/she employed them. If the words of someone else are used, the student must put quotation marks around the passage in question and add an appropriate indication of its origin. Making simple changes while leaving the organization, content and phraseology intact is plagiaristic. However, nothing in these Rules shall apply to those ideas which are so generally and freely circulated as to be a part of the public domain (Section 6.3.1).

Please note: Any assignment you turn in may be submitted to an electronic database to check for plagiarism.
Late Work

Due dates for all assignments are provided on the semester course calendar at the end of this syllabus. I will expect all assignments, except the weekly response papers, to be submitted on Canvas by class time (2 pm) on the day they are due. Graduate students should not be submitting late assignments. However, in extreme circumstances (deemed by me to be extreme) I will accept an assignment late. In that case, your assignment will receive a 10% deduction for every day that it is submitted late. NOTE: Completion of all assignments is necessary for successful completion of the course. No one may receive a passing grade without completing all of the assignments.

Incomplete grades (“Is”) are given in CJT 651 only in extreme situations, where a documented late-in-the-semester medical or family emergency is presented to the instructor before incomplete assignments are due. Finally, it is expected that all assignments for this class be original. To re-work or “extend” a paper from another course is academic plagiarism. However, students are welcome to build upon previous work in an area of inquiry. If you have any question about this policy, I would be delighted to discuss your projects with you early in the term.

Technology Policy

I recognize that we live in a digital world and staying connected is important. However, during seminar, I expect you to turn your cell phone on silent and any other things that you own that vibrate, beep, ring, or are distracting to you and others while in this class should be silenced too.

I see the value of having your laptop in the classroom and I realize that many of you will use your laptop to take notes and consult readings for the week. Your laptop should not be viewed as an opportunity to surf the web, update your Facebook or Instagram page, etc. There will be certain times in class when I ask everyone to put away your laptops (e.g., guest lectures, classmate presentations, etc.). If computer use becomes a distraction to learning/teaching, I will not hesitate to ban them. I reserve the right to ask you to leave the class for the day if you are text messaging or using your cell phone and/or laptop inappropriately.

Food/Drink in the Classroom

Small snacks and drinks are permitted in class, as long as they do not distract (e.g., large food items, crinkly wrappers, strong odors, etc.) others from learning.

1 I would like to note that this syllabus was created and adapted based on course material presented in previous syllabi by Dr. Derek Lane (UK) and also Dr. Paul Mongeau (ASU). I appreciate their assistance and willingness to share their intellectual ideas.
